It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

RECOMMENDATION.

10-29-27 H. H.
THE BIBLE is a book of such transcendent worth, and so happily suited to all the parts and purposes of the Christian life, that it can never be too much recommended to the world: every thing that allures the world to peruse it, is a blessing to mankind. And though it is hard for our narrow capacities to grasp and take in the several distinguishing excellencies of it at one view, yet if we take a separate survey of the doctrines and duties, the promises and threatenings, the prophecies and histories which are contained therein, each of them will afford us an awful or a delightful prospect, with lessons for special improvement.

The worthy author of this collection, whom I have long known with esteem and honour, has chosen to reduce all the most useful and important Promises of the word of God into order, and set them before us here. These are the most powerful motives to duty; these are the constant food of a living Christian, as well as his highest cordials in a fainting hour. And in such a world as this, where duties perpetually demand our practice, and difficulties and trials are ever surrounding us, what can we do better than to treasure up the Promises in our hearts, which are the most effectual persuasives to fulfil the one, and sustain the other. Here are laid up the true riches of Christians and his highest hopes on this side of heaven.

The materials which are collected here are all divine, and the disposition of them is elegant and regular; so that it is an easy matter to find something suited to the frame of our souls, or our present wants, on every occasion; and that soul who knows what a suitable promise is worth in an hour of darkness or temptation, will never think such a work as this, and such a various treasure, can have sufficient value set upon it.

Those who have little leisure for reading, may find their account in keeping this book always near them, and with the glance of an eye, they may take in the riches of grace and glory, and derive many a sweet refreshment from hence amidst their labours and travels through this wilderness. It is of excellent use to lie on the table in a chamber of sickness, and now and then to take a sip of the River of Life, which runs through it in a thousand little rills of peace and joy.

May the Holy Spirit of God, who indited all these Promises, and our blessed Mediator, who, by his ministry and by his blood, has sealed and confirmed them all, render them every day more and more powerful and prevalent, to draw the hearts of men towards God, and to fit them for the enjoyment of these words of grace in their complete accomplishment in glory. Amen.

INTRODUCTION:

CONTAINING

Some Observations upon the Excellency and Use of the PROMISES, and Directions for the right Application of them.

BESIDES the many other evidences the holy scripture carries in it, of a divine original, there are especially remarkable the sublimity, excellency and reasonableness of the doctrines it teaches; the wisdom, holiness, and perfection of the rules of life it lays down; and the strength and efficacy of those sanctions with which it enforces its precepts. As the Threatenings have the greatest tendency to strike an awe upon the mind, and to lay a powerful restraint upon every irregular inclination; so the Promises are of such a nature, as most strongly to excite to, and give the greatest encouragement in a course of piety and universal holiness. It is therefore with the highest reason the apostle says of them, That, there are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these we might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust, 2 Peter, i. 4. They are great and excellent; whether we consider the nature and variety of the blessings contained in them, the manner in which they are expressed, the certainty with which we may depend upon them, or their happy influence upon the mind.

They contain blessings of all sorts, of the most excellent nature, and suited to every circumstance. As man is made up of body, as well as spirit, and the necessities of this present life must be provided for, as well as his happiness secured in the next; in the Promises abundant care is taken of both, and provision is made for the peace, comfort, and welfare of the Christian, both in this, and in the other world. He is assured of the several necessities and conveniences of this life, in such a measure as Infinite Wisdom sees best for him. And since we are exposed to various troubles and calamities, there are many Promises made with relation to them; either that we shall be preserved from those afflictions, or, if it be necessary we should be exercised with them, that we shall be powerfully supported under them, and in the best time and way, delivered from them, after that they have been made to answer the most excellent ends upon us. Nor is it easy to say, what a vast variety of consolations are provided for our relief in those trials. But, however valuable, considering the circumstances of our present state, the Promises relating to temporal enjoyments and afflictions, may be, they are not to be compared with the excellency and glory of those spiritual and eternal blessings, with which we are blessed in Christ Jesus, and of which we have the most clear, full, and express Promises in the gospel. Therein, how great, how particular a regard is had to the condition of fallen, sinful man! What care is taken to ease the conscience under the burden of guilt, and the apprehensions of divine wrath, by the most gracious promises of pardon and mercy! What assurances given of reconciliation and acceptance with God, through the blood and intercession of the Redeemer! To what glorious privileges and high honours is the Christian advanced! Such as the adoption of children, a kind regard to all his prayers, the ministry of angels, and an interest in the grace, love and fellowship of God the Father, and of his eternal Son and Spirit. In the Promises is contained all that grace which is requisite to refine and ennoble our natures, to enlighten our understandings, to regulate our wills, and purify our affections; to preserve us from sin, and all the contrivances and snares of the devil and the world, and to exalt us to the highest perfection of holiness and happiness.

The manner in which these blessings are promised, still further adds to their value. They are not expressed in general or ambiguous terms, but with the greatest clearness and perspicuity. God would not leave his people at an uncertainty, concerning his kind intentions towards them. If the meaning of the promise seems doubtful in one place, it is abundantly cleared up in several others. Nor is it only here and there in some few passages, or in a cold and reserved manner, that God has signified his good will; but, upon the account of our dullness and slowness to believe what God has promised; he has both made use of the strongest words and phrases that language could furnish out, and has over and over, in great variety of expression, often repeated the assurances of his favour. He has contrived his Promises so, as to meet with all our objections, and remove all our doubts and fears: and herein he has been pleased to show an affection, tenderness, and condescension, which could not be expected from an earthly prince to his subjects; much less from the great and glorious majesty of heaven and earth, to sinful dust and ashes.

But what doth in the highest degree enhance the worth and excellency of the Promises, is, the evidences we have, that they shall certainly be made good; since, as the Apostle argues, Heb. vi. 17, 18, we have for them both the word and oath of that God that cannot lie, that so we might have strong consolations

tion, who have fled for refuge, to lay hold upon the hope set before us. And of the covenant thus confirmed, Christ the Son of God is made the Surety, Heb. vii. 22; having ratified it by his own blood. And that all the ever blessed Trinity might concur in establishing our faith upon the strongest foundation, the Holy Spirit of God witnesses to the truth of the Promises; by his miraculous operations, when first poured forth upon the Apostles, and by his sanctifying influences upon the hearts of all true Christians, both then, and ever since. Hereby he inspires into them a lively hope, and furnishes them with well grounded evidences of their interest in the Promises; and their hope makes them not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in their hearts by the Holy Ghost, which is given unto them, Rom. v. 5.

The Promises therefore of the gospel being of so excellent a nature, and confirmed to us by such authority and evidence, cannot but have very great and happy influences upon the mind, when seriously attended to, and applied with faith; especially as they are the means by which the Spirit of God carries on his work upon the soul. They are the strongest arguments to persuade the sinner to turn to God; the greatest encouragements to an humble, believing dependence upon the grace of Christ in the gospel, and the most powerful motives to sincere and uni-vernal obedience; since by them we are assured, that every penitent sinner shall find the most gracious acceptance; that from the grace of Christ we shall derive sufficient strength and capacity for every duty; and that in keeping God's commands there is great reward. So that would we but duly consider the several Promises made to every exercise of grace, and every performance of duty, what a spur would this be to quicken our slow pace in the ways of holiness! What an encouragement to be steadfast and immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as we know that our labour is not in vain in the Lord, 1 Cor. xv. 58.

A fixed, constant attention to the Promises, and a firm belief of them, would prevent solicitude and anxiety about the concerns of this life. It would keep the mind quiet and composed in every change, and support and keep up our sinking spirits under the several troubles of life. In the multitude of my thoughts within me, thy comforts delight my soul, Ps. xciv. 19. Christians deprive themselves of their most solid comforts by their unbelief, and forgetfulness of God's Promises. For there is no extremity so great, but there are Promises suitable to it, and abundantly sufficient for our relief in it.

A thorough acquaintance with the Promises would be of the greatest advantage in prayer. With what comfort may the Chris-

Can address himself to God in Christ, when he considers the repeated assurances that his prayer shall be heard? With how much satisfaction may he offer up the several desires of his heart, when he reflects upon the texts wherein those very mercies are promised?—And with what fervour of spirit, and strength of faith, may he enforce his prayers, by pleading the several gracious Promises, which are expressly to his case?

Further: Great assistance and encouragement may the Christian derive in his spiritual warfare, when he takes a view of the many Promises of grace and strength, to mortify sin, and to resist the devil: of success, and a final victory in his conflicts with the enemies of his salvation; and of an incorruptible crown of glory, to be given him as the reward of his firmness, constancy and perseverance. A great deal more may be said, but that I would not too much enlarge this Introduction, to show of what excellent use the Promises would be, if duly attended to, to promote all the exercises of the divine life, and to inspire into a good man comfort and joy in every state of life.

That the Christian might have before him, in one view, the many great and precious Promises scattered up and down in scripture, and in such a method as easily to find what is suitable to his case, I have drawn up the following Collection.

The Blessings promised, are either of a temporal or of a spiritual and eternal nature: it may be necessary to lay down some rules, to direct the serious Christian in the right application of these different sorts of Promises.

As to the Promises of temporal blessings, and those that relate to temporal evils, it is acknowledged by all, they are not to be understood absolutely or universally, but with the limitation, as far as may be for God's glory, and our good; both which are, in effect, one. Nor will these limitations lessen their value, with any thinking serious person.—For all outward things are of such a nature, as to be capable of being either good or evil to us, as circumstances vary. Riches, though in some circumstances they may be very useful and valuable, in which case God will bestow them according to the tenor of his Promises; yet in others they may be, and often prove, very pernicious: no wise man, in that case, would desire them. Thus afflictions in some instances, may be of the greatest advantage to us. Then they are mercies, the inflicting them is a token of favour, and the preventing them would be a judgment, instead of fulfilling a promise. Now it must be allowed that of all these circumstances, the infinitely wise and good God is the best judge; since he has before him in one view, the whole compass of every case, in all its circumstances, and is more concerned and watchful for our good, than we can be ourselves. The Promises therefore relating to these things, should not lie by neglected; but we should fix our faith upon them for the mercies we want, with a firm dependence upon the power and faithfulness of God, though with an entire submission to his superior wisdom, to choose what is best for us.— I verily believe, Christians often deprive themselves even of temporal favours from God, for want of a more frequent steadfast exercise of faith upon the Promises relating to these things. They either ask not, or not in faith, and therefore receive nothing from God, Jam. i. 6, 7. Or they desire and ask, but not for right ends (to take notice of another limitation hinted at by the same apostle, Jam. iv. 3.) not for God's honour, but to consume it upon their lusts; and so they ask amiss, and therefore receive not. This collection therefore will give great assistance to the faith of Christians, when they observe how full and express the Promises are, and how suitable to their several exigencies, even in things concerning this life.

It may be objected to many of the texts, that they are taken out of the Old Testament, and were Promises made to the Jews under a dispensation wherein a greater stress is laid upon temporal blessings, than under the gospel; and consequently, that Christians cannot expect so much from these Promises.

I answer, That it is true, the gospel has a much greater tendency to draw our affections from, and lessen our regard to our outward felicity and prosperity, than the law; since it has brought in a better hope, and gives more clear discoveries, and more full assurances of spiritual and eternal blessings, and recommends these as our main concern; and therefore our desires and expectations of temporal blessings, ought to be very moderate, and bear no proportion with our concern for spiritual. But yet that Christians may take comfort in, and apply to themselves the Promises of the Old Testament, and in things relating to this life, is evident from that declaration of the apostle, 1 Tim. iv. 8; Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.—Where the apostle affirms, not only that godliness is profitable to this, as well as another life, but that it has Promises relating to both; by which it is probable he meant those of the Old Testament, a great part of the New being not then committed to writing, or not published among the churches. Besides, as was observed before, the Promises made in the Old Testament, the apostle applies to Christians, and that upon the principle above mentioned, Rom. xv. 4; an instance of which we have, among others, in his pressing ob-dense to parents on Christians, Eph. vi. 2, 3; from the temporal Promise annexed to the fifth commandment, delivered to the Jews.—To which may be added, that there are many Promises of temporal blessings to be found in the gospel, as full and as expressive as those in the Old Testament, as will appear upon the perusal of this Collection.

Nor do I think the case of good men under the law so different from that of Christians, with relation to outward blessings, as some may apprehend. It is plain, those Promises were not to them absolute or universal, but to be understood with the same limitations as now; and that in those times, as well as since, the righteous were frequently exercised with severe afflictions, and the wicked had many times a greater share of outward prosperity than even the best of men; the want of a due attention to which, was the reason of the heavy censures Job met with from his friends.

As to the Promises of spiritual and eternal blessings, they are to be applied according to the tenor of the gospel. It is to faith, repentance, love and sincere obedience, that the Promises in general, are made of pardon, grace and glory; as appears from a great multitude of texts here collected. And indeed, without these dispositions, none can justly lay claim to any of the temporal Promises.—But because in many cases, a serious person may be doubtful whether he is converted or not, whether there be in him that faith, repentance, and holiness, which may be a proof that he is in a state of favour with God, and so entitled to the Promises; I observe, that as there is a difference between grace begun, in its first exercises, and when it is arrived to a confirmed habit; so many of the Promises are made to the first beginnings and exercises of grace, in praying and seeking after God, in the use of appointed means, in turning from sin, and coming to Christ. Thus the Promises of a new heart are made to those who inquire after God, Ezek. xxxvi. 26, 27; of wisdom to them that search for it, Prov. ii. 4, 5; of the spirit to them that ask it, Luke, xi. 13, and of rest in Christ to them that being weary and heavy laden, come to him, Matth. xi. 28. Which, therefore, every one who finds in himself those beginnings of grace, may apply to himself, as an encouragement to go on.

It is also to be observed, that the other Promises of divine influences, of the increase of grace, of preservation from sin, of grace to persevere to the end, &c. and so of everlasting life and glory; though every sincere Christian may apply them, and depend upon them, yet they all suppose the diligent use of all the means of grace, watchfulness, a constant application to, and dependence upon, the strength of Christ, and the grace of his holy Spirit, and a sincere regard to all the other duties of the gospel; as appears from John, xv. 4, 10; and many other passages to be found in this collection, especially in the latter part.

To obtain the comfort of the Promises in the second part, every one must see that they be in a good degree possessed of the graces, and that they diligently perform the duties, to which the Promises are made; and that from a principle of faith in Christ and love to God, expressed in an habitual care and endeavour to please him. For whatever duty we do, without a real regard to God therein, depending upon Christ for acceptance, In whom all the promises are yea and amen, we can expect no reward from him. God may justly reject such a claim, with, Did ye it all to me, even to me? And for the same reason, the observing of some duties, while we knowingly allow ourselves in acts of disobedience to other commands, will not support our claim to the Promises; because, if we acted with a sincere respect to God, we should show the same regard to all his known laws, Jam. ii. 10, 11.

As a Christian ought to be concerned, not only for himself, but for the whole church of God, and the interest of Christ's kingdom here on earth; I thought it very necessary to lay before him, what the scripture affords for the raising of his hopes, and encouraging his prayers upon those important subjects:

And this is the design of that collection of texts, in the Appendix.

I am sensible that many of the texts I have brought, which foretell the enlargement and glory of the church, have already had, in some degree, their accomplishment in the conversion of the Gentiles to the Christian faith; but upon a thorough consideration of several of the prophecies, concerning the spreading of the gospel throughout all nations, the subjection of all kings to the authority of Christ, and the glorious state of the church in the latter days, as Psal. lxxxvi. 9. Isa. lxvi. 18. Dan. vii. 27. Zech. xiv. 9, &c., it appears to me, there is still to be expected a fuller accomplishment of them than has yet been. But which have been already fulfilled, and which still remain to be so, I leave to every one's judgment, upon considering and comparing the texts.

Some of the texts I have applied to the church in general, are by some interpreters understood of the church of the Jews, when converted to Christ in the latter ages of the world: as Isa. iv. 3, and xxvii. 6, and lx, and lxii. Nor do I deny but it is probable, that people are more immediately pointed at in those prophecies. But as the Gentile and Jewish church will then be one, there will be a communication of privileges and glory: and consequently in whatever measure the Spirit of God is poured out, and the glory of God manifested among the Jews when converted, the Gentile church will enjoy their share of the benefit: for, if the fall of them be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles, how much more their fullness? Rom. xi. 12.

Though this Collection has cost me not a little time and pains, I think it very well bestowed not only upon the account of the advantage I have myself received from the study of the Promises, and the assistance I still expect, from this book for my private thoughts and composures for the pulpit, by having it continually before me: but also in hopes it may be useful to others in several respects, for promoting the holiness and comfort of Christians. Here they have before them, in one view, the riches of the covenant of grace; here are all the strongest arguments to persuade to real religion, to recommend every duty, and to support in every afflicted and perplexed case. This book may be very useful to assist in prayer, both for the reasons before mentioned, and also because from hence, one may be furnished with a variety of proper matter and expression upon all the cases we are concerned to represent to God. And as the study of these Promises would be to the advantage of all sorts of persons, it might be a very useful and easy exercise for children to be employed in learning some of the plainest texts under those heads which are most proper for them, and to question one another upon them, being instructed by their teachers in their sense and use. In this way the directors of the education of children in the charity schools, may make this book serve good purposes, for the instruction and improvement of their children in the knowledge of the scriptures. And I know no better way of enriching the minds of children with useful and solid knowledge, than by making them well acquainted with the scriptures themselves, those pure unmixed fountains of excellence and divine wisdom, and treasuring up in their memories a great number of select scriptures most suited to their capacity and use.

That we may have the comfort of the Promises, a steady exercise of faith is, above all things, necessary. For this purpose, we must impress upon our minds the power, goodness, and faithfulness of God, and the experience of good men in every age; and by this means, and by an attentive consideration of the Promises, suck at those breasts of consolation till we are satisfied, Isa. lxvi. 11. But at the same time our eyes must be fixed upon the Lord Jesus Christ, as the only foundation of our hopes, in and through whom alone all the Promises are made good to us; and upon the Holy Spirit the Comforter, that through his powerful influences we may rightly understand and apply, firmly believe, and clearly discover the excellency of the Promises, and so taste that the Lord is gracious.

Constantly plead the Promises with God in prayer. He has thereby bound himself to his people, as with a note under his hand. Go with it therefore to God, firmly depending upon his faithfulness; he will acknowledge his own hand-writing, and answer your demands accordingly. Rest yourself, therefore, upon God, and wait patiently for him, being assured he will not be unmindful of his promise: but leave it to his infinite wisdom to fulfil it, in that way, and at that time he sees best.

But remember the Promises of God do not discharge from, but encourage and oblige to, the diligent use of all proper and lawful means. Christ has promised food and raiment: but the slothful and careless must not expect the benefit of that Promise. The same may be said of the spiritual blessings promised. The soul of the slothful desireth, and hath nothing; but the soul of the diligent shall be made fat, Prov. xiii. 4.

To conclude: Let the Christian live a life of faith upon the Promises. A great part of the riches of the nation at this day, consists in the credit that is given to notes, bonds, assignments, &c. I am sure the riches of the Christian lie chiefly in the assignments he has under God's hand, of the most valuable blessings both of this and a better life. Let him then know how to value these as the truest riches, and to make use of them upon all occasions; he will find no want of any good thing. If he has it not in hand, he has it in the promise, ready whenever he needs it. So that he may live entirely free from solicitude and anxious care, committing himself, and all his concerns, to that God who careth for him.
